Economy and Insurance Industry

2019 Thailand's Economic Outlook (source: NESDB ECONOMIC REPORT, Nov 19, 2017)

The Thai economy in 2019 is projected to grow in the range of 3.5 - 4.5 percent, supported by an improvement of total investment attributed by acceleration of public investment and further improvement of private investment, the expansion was supported by the speed up in private consumption and private investment, and the continued expansion of government consumption and public investment. The trend of tourism, foreign tourists increased from increasing safety standards. In addition, there is strong support from the economic growth and world trade volume that can support the export sector continuously, despite the slowdown in the major economies. The election that will take place in early 2019 will affect the credit rating of the Thai economy and affect the confidence of foreign investors in the capital market. Both Thai and foreign investors have more confidence in investing in Thailand. As for the Thai baht, there are still volatile factors following the challenges of the global economy and in 2019, the Bank of Thailand is expected to increase the Interest rate policy again because the Federal Reserve (Fed) is likely to increase interest rates to prevent capital outflows in the country.

Supporting factors for the economic growth

1. Private consumption tends to keep its growth momentum, and correspondingly support the overall economic expansion. Particularly, it grew with stronger. These improvements were in line with (i) the overall improvement of income conditions, especially those related to tourism, exports, and manufacturing sectors in the preceding period, (ii) the improvement of income base of those in the agricultural sector in line, and (iii) the stronger employment conditions as observed that the number of employed to be comprised positive growths of employed persons both in the agricultural and non-agricultural sectors. In addition, the unemployment rate was also lowest in 8 quarters.

2. Investment tends to show a further improvement led by accelerated growth of public investment. Specifically, key public infrastructure projects have made significant progresses and entered into the construction phase.

3. A recovery in the tourism sector will contribute more to the overall economy. Thai government has been ensuring standards for tourist safety and an additional advocate of Thailand's tourism sector targeting Chinese and other major countries. Thus, once combined with a recovery in the number of European tourists, it is expected that the total number of tourists will bounce back to its normal trend by the end of the first quarter of 2019 and, as a result, would support the economic growth in 2019 significantly.

4. Exports continue to exhibit a satisfactory growth and continually buttress economic performance. It is expected that the world economy and trade volume in 2019 will grow by 3.8 and 3.8 percent, respectively. These growth paces of world economy and trade volume will continue to support the Thai exports and overall economic expansion.

5. Redirection of international trade, global manufacturing, and foreign investment will become more apparent, as a result of the trade protectionism and retaliation between the major advanced economies. Consequently, the world economy and world trade volumes are likely to slow down and would therefore affect economic growth of export-dependent developing countries, particularly during the early implementation phase of trade barriers and counter measures as the trade and supply chain adaptive capability may be limited. However, without additional trade protection measures, it is expected that the trade and supply chain system will be able to adjust and thus will start to positively affect the Thai economy. A number of products and sectors will likely gain some benefits from the changes in trade direction and supply chain both in terms of rising exports and capacity utilization during the first half of the year as well as production base relocation that is expected to be more pronounced in the second half of the year.

Limitation and Risk Factors:

1. The global economy and financial system are likely to be vulnerable to fluctuations and lower-than anticipated economic growth. Key risk factors include: (i) the uncertainty of trade protection and reciprocal retaliation, with additional US trade restrictions imposed on China and its other trade partners, including the EU and Japan, as well as the uncertainty of trade negotiation outcome under USMCA framework, and the possible extension of Chinese countermeasures. These aforementioned trade barriers would negatively affect trading-partner economies, world trade volume, global economy, and Thai exports to grow slower than expected; (ii) the slowdown trend of the Chinese economy and the risk of instability from imbalanced economy, which might be aggravated by trade protection measures, together with capital movements and manufacturing relocation; (iii) economic instability in some emerging economies that could be worsened during the Fed's normalizing process amid the global economic downturn; (iv) nonaligned US political policy directions between the Democrat party and the Republican party that would hinder the resolution to the US public debt ceiling and may lead to the government shutdown; (v) the risk that the UK may not be able to reach an agreement on the exit from EU (No Deal Brexit); (vi) Italian government's plan increase public spending that causes higher budget deficit amidst the high public debt, which may lead to sovereign bond downgrade and adversely affect overall sentiment and unity of the Eurozone; and (vii) oil price volatility which remains upon the OPEC's decision on production capacity and the US's exemption on 8 oil importers from Iran including China, India, Greece, Italy, Taiwan, Japan, Turkey and South Korea, as well as the unity of OPEC.

2. The possible delay in the recovery of tourist arrival numbers, Although numbers of Russian, European, and Chinese tourists are expected to improve and return to the normal level within the second quarter of 2019, there may be some possibilities that the recovery process will be slower than expected, partly under the slowdown of the Chinese economy and the Yuan depreciation.

3. The global interest rates may rise faster than economic fundamental, which would affect the recovery of major advanced economies. In particular, the US trade protectionism policies ultimately increased its production cost, and in turn lead to higher-than-expected inflation, together with increasing global bond supply from the US budget deficit, the Fed balance sheet reduction, and the expected completion of ECB asset purchase program, would thus lead to a faster-than-expected rise in the US fund rate as well as the US and the global bond yields.

4. The uncertainty of politics in Thailand, after the announcement of the election date in 2019 has caused the share price and investment in Thailand to increase as it increases economic confidence and the credibility level of Thailand for both investors. Thai and foreigners In addition, it also affects the expectation of stability and peace in the country that will increase after the election. However, still have to keep an eye on the impact of the election results and the new government's economic policy that will result in any direction

5. Fluctuation of the Thai baht, due to the appreciation of the Thai baht against the US dollar in 2018, the Thai baht value in 2019 is likely to be strengthened by the main factor that investors are exposed to high risks. From the United States and China agreed to suspend the enforcement of the tax increase resolution, both sides will return to negotiate a trade agreement again and the outcome of the negotiations may affect the Thai baht. In addition, volatility is also affected by the Thai economy is likely to be more slow due to various factors, whether it is a slowdown in the export sector due to the value of Thai baht, the tourism sector facing challenges from the global economy and including International capital movements.

2019 Thailand's Insurance industry direction

The Office of Insurance Commission (OIC) predicts that from the current situation, there are still positive support factors, including changes in the direction of trade, production and international investment. As a result, exports are likely to grow at a good level and the improvement of investment in accordance with the acceleration of government investment and private investment continues to expand. Household expenditure tends to grow at a good level, driven by the tourism sector to increase. As a result, the outlook for the end of the year 2019 will be approximately 904,550 million baht, 4.9 - 5.9 percent growth, estimated life insurance premiums of 664,354 million baht, 5 - 6 percent growth, and non-life insurance premiums of 240,197 million baht, growing 4.7 percent. - 5.7.
